

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method of printing an image with an inkjet printer system, said system comprising a printhead arranged to print swaths of image content parallel to a first axis on a print medium, said swaths having a width in a second axis substantially perpendicular to said first axis, said method comprising the steps of: determining the length of said image in said second axis; and, resizing said image such that said resized length of said image in said second axis is substantially an integer multiple of said swath width.